

Al-Naseem Dairy and Ice cream Company won the B.I.D. International Quality Award in New York 2010 competing against 65 different countries... [wonder about that]

In an article called “The secrets of the Libyan war“, Al-Kifah Al-Arabi magazine reveals Al-Naseem factory’s role before the start of the February 17th revolution in Libya:

[the online magazine has mysteriously vanished since the publishing of the article & we could only find this document containing the link to the article by using the google history function]

“...The spark that ignited the current Libyan clashes as a pretext for foreign intervention began on the port of Misrata city...

...Weeks before the start of the Libyan revolution, the port of Misrata was used by the rebels to smuggle containers full of weapons, ammunition and explosives with cooperation of the rebels sympathizers port’s managers...

... The arms containers were emptied at Misrata’s port without going through any customs inspection and kept in the Al-Naseem’s underground stores. Later the arms were transported to Benghazi, Tripoli and other cities in Dairy trucks to be distributed among the rebels on the first days of the revolution...”

The question asked by the magazine is: Where did these arms come from?

Post-embargo era Libya was interested in distributing its investment in a balanced manner between development and arms, oil contracts with China, arms contracts with Russia, and billion dollar contracts with Germany from wind-farms, to about 12 German oil companies active in Libya (here is an excellent book “The Libyan economy: economic diversification and international repositioning” explain the success of the Libyan economic process).

Also a good article about “Germany interests in Libya” on WSWS.org and why European countries affected by these contracts moved to encourage the rebels living abroad Islamists inside Libya to start their revolution.

The interview with Ali Al-Tarhouni the head of the financial and economic affairs in the Libyan National Transitional Council telling German newspaper Zeit, gives us a clear indication on who is behind the arms containers:

“...I think that countries such as France who helped us in the very early stage [of the revolution] will reap the benefits of this position ... Our most beautiful beaches in the world are very close to Europe ... We want to establish a financial center in collaboration with international investors...”

Our official reports on the crimes against humanity in Tawergha:

<http://tawergha.org/official-reports.html>

Our news items on the crimes against humanity in Tawergha:

<http://tawergha.org/news-items.html>

Current story source: [vanished mysteriously again but retrieved by using google history function]

<http://www.roadstoiraq.com/the-libyan-revolution-come-to-the-dark-side-we-have-ice-cream>

About Al Naseem & the privatization of National Libyan companies like the Dutch HVA Dairy project in Tawergha & Benghazi:

<http://www.tawergha.org/docs/libya-agribusiness-development-report-2012.pdf>